Milton Public Schools - Behavioral health has become a critical need in our school system, as it is in schools across the country. Our Adjustment Counselors work tirelessly in all our schools. They work individually with children and families, and they meet in case management teams to discuss supports needed for struggling children. Dr. Karen Spaulding has secured two competitive Safe and Supportive Schools state grants, to take each (and every) school through an assessment and action planning process to more systematically address the behavioral health protocols, policies and trainings needed at the district and school levels. Furthermore, over the coming year, the district will be researching and implementing the Positive Behavioral Health Interventions and Support (PBIS) system, a multi-tiered framework for making schools safer by promoting positive student behaviors. This past year, MPS has prioritized social-emotional learning, and we are now part of a statewide network of nine school systems learning about best practices for promoting positive school climates, as well as the emotional intelligence and social competencies of our children. To bolster our partnership with families, we have launched Promoting Awareness and Resources for the Emotional Nurturing of Teens (PARENT), a series of workshops to enhance the skills of parents in raising resilient children, in a partnership with MSAPC and BID Hospital Milton.
