

The Garment of Destiny

By: June Padera

The garment of destiny that ties us all Is love

It leads us
in the darkest of nights and it guides us into challenging ourselves

It ties us all
no matter
race
religion
age
nationality
or orientation

We all want love,
whether you want it from a partner
parent
sibling
friend
pet
or other

The only thing that can sever this garment of destiny is hate

Hate rips love into shreds throws it on the ground and spits on it

The hate you feel is dangerous it will best love every time

But the love you feel regenerates it will survive no matter what

There's always something you can do something you can say

Love, you can't fight for yourself,
So we must fight for you
