Take the Next Step: Conversations About Transition

The path to college, work and more for high school students with Learning and Other Challenges, beginning Tuesday, November 17

A FREE three-part webinar series: Tues., Nov. 17 and Thurs., Dec. 3, 2020; Tues. Jan. 12, 2021 – 7:00-8:00 p.m. EST
Sessions will take place via Zoom. Registration is required.

Students who have overcome learning differences and other social-emotional challenges look to their high school graduation with excitement and a well-earned sense of achievement. Like all graduates, the excitement may be mixed with a bit of apprehension about life after high school.

Taking the next step beyond high school can be complicated at any time. Taking the next step in the midst of a pandemic can seem overwhelming. That's why you will want to take part in one or all of the Zoom conversations in the Take the Next Step three-part webinar series, beginning Tuesday, November 17, 2020, from 7:00-8:00 p.m.

Our transition experts will offer tips and advice to help make the transition to college, postsecondary training, work or other exciting alternatives easier for students with LD and other challenges.

Learn about resources and services from local and national experts in all areas of transition over three evenings this fall and winter.

Listen in and bring your questions. Our panelists will inspire participants to see this period of self-definition as a unique opportunity for great personal growth and share the many opportunities available.

Sincerely,

Paul Stein, Executive Director
Schools for Children
