Milton Public Health Department - This year, MSAPC received a Behavioral Health Grant from the Blue Hills Community Health Alliance to support two new community programs.

1. At the High School, we are investigating the implementation of a program called Bridge for Resilient Youth in Transition (BRYT). This program provides clinical, academic, social and family supports for students for several critical weeks following their return to school, primarily after a behavioral health crisis. BRYT helps these students get back on track to graduate with their peers by supporting their academic, social and emotional needs. Currently, there are as many as 50 high school students who could benefit by this program.

2. At the Police Department, we are implementing a Milton Cares Post Overdose Response Program. A trained plain-clothed officer and social worker or recovery coach would visit the home of a family after an overdose, to offer them support and opportunities for treatment. There were over 40 opioid overdoses in Milton this past year, and this does not include alcohol or other drug emergencies.
